A. Introduction

English grammar is the set of principles or rules dealing with the word structures (morphology) and sentence structures (syntax) of the English language. Grammar as one of linguistic competence is important to be learnt as Riemsdijk and William (1987 : 1) say "the study of grammar is a part of study of language in which it's part concerned with the rules of sentences requires not only proficiency in vocabulary, pronunciation, spelling and arrangement of words but also correct grammar.

Grammar is bound up with the meaning and effect of what we write and say; it gives us the words to talk about the choices we make when we communicate. Native speakers can get grammar without learning grammar, but to borrow an analogy from Professor Crystal (Professor of Linguistics at the University of Wales, Bangor). It's like driving without knowing the names for the parts of your car. By mastering grammar, someone can write, read, and speak well unfortunately many students do not like to study grammar.

Gerund and participle are verbal that do not use as verb in the sentence. The writer found that most students face difficulty in distinguishing gerund and participles because both gerund and participles were derived from verb.
